March 18-19, 2026 • 8:00 a.m. – 5:00 p.m.

Those assigned to the all-important role of Field Training Officer attend training on how an FTO process should be managed. They are instructed on what subjects and tactics recruit officers need to be evaluated on. However, few FTOs are trained themselves, on how to teach and demonstrate those subjects and tactics.

Scenarios & Tactics for the Field Training Officer is a dynamic, interactive and informative seminar developed by highly experienced police officers, trainers and FTOs.

In this two-day program, students will examine their FTO role from the very beginning of the field training process to the ultimate end. They will address the Why about their role and goals. They will learn how to teach adults and consider generational differences. They will reexamine their understanding of tactics and how to mentor, demonstrate and teach recruits to develop an understanding of how proficiency is developed and how they should utilize that understanding as their careers progress.

Scenarios: Each student will be given dozens of scenarios to take with them and utilize during the training process. They will learn how to include recruits, how to run them and what to look for as recruits participate.
